ON THE NEW YORK STAGE. stand a mixing of champagne and whiskey. THE SEASON OF VAUDEVILLE SHOWS ON THE TOPS OF THEATRES.

John Mason and Victory Bateman Interesting rsonally and Professionally in Continuous Performances-A Robertson Comedy

The season of roof-garden vaudeville shows began ast night. The weather was unpropitious, and so the start was more nominal than actual. The tops of theatres were too cool and damp for com-fort. At the Victoria there was a sufficient amount of gay vivacity to keep the occasion from anything like a depressed state. Even when the electric lights went out and the enterainment was suspended in darkness for awhile the people made merry over the mishap. The Venetian Terrace, as the uniquely attractive structure over the Victoria is named, had been out into a spick and span condition, and nothing but heat below was lacking to make it a delightful resort up there. The central platform was used instead of an ordinary stage, as had been done last year, and the performance thereon was to a considerable extent a circus. It included juggling by Satsume, acrobatic feats by the Navarros, remarkable bicycling by the Johnstone brothers, a buresque prizefight by the Rossow midgets, restling and other things by Morris's ponies, eccentricities by the long Hayes and the short Healy, tumbling by the one weman and the two men Livingstons, and the Wormwood circus of dogs and monkeys. These things, ranging from pretty fair to extremely good, were more suitable and effectual for an open-air show than the ordinary specialties of vaudeville. Besides them tip-toe dances by a tall and violent Marian Winchester, some dancing of more conventional grace, by Czarina, tenor vocalism by Giovanni Portonova with a Lazgaroni orchestra, and negro songs and dances Louise Dresser and her pickaninnies.

The other roof garden open to the air, the one a-too Koster & Bial's Music Hall, was announced to open Saturday, but it did not on account of the rain. The starting of the summer season was advanced to last night, but again postponed because the management considered the weather too cold for comfort in the night air. The garden is much handsomer than last year, though its chief attraction, its coolness, is unchanged. A big fountain has been built in the centre of the roof, and colored lights play on its streaming waters. More plants have been put in front of the boxes that extend down each side of the part set aside for reserved serts. Palms have been put in convenient corners, and more colored lights have been put on the arches. If warm enough, and clear, the roof will open to-night, when the Hungarian Band from the cafe will play during the intermissions and after the show at the back, and the entertainment from the music hall will be given on the stage. The show, which is excellent, starts with a clever clay modeller, Bicknell. He stands a few feet from a board, onto which he throws soft clay, which he forms into faces, some comic and some representing prominent men. Mile. Olive, a juzgler, appeared second, and others on the programme are, Mile. Emmy, an animal trainer: Edwin Latell, a clever musical comedian; Emma Carus, whose voice had the deep tones of a barytone; George C. Davis, Conway and Leland, Williams and Adams, Mohr sisters, Vouletti and Carlos, and Trovollo, a vantriloquist. The breezy weather had no effect on the third roof garden that was announced to open, the Cherry Blossom Grove on top of the New York and Criterion theatres. Its glass and iron roof warms under the sun so that last night the place was comparatively warm. A Japanese atmosphere has been aimed at in the new decorations. The rustic bridges that Oscar Hammerstein built have been removed and bamboo ones put in their places. The garden's covering has been beaulified with artificial cherry blossoms and wisteria. In keeping with these decorations was the Japanese ballet from "Broadway to Tokio," which was given on a reduced scale to suit the stage. The rest of the show was made up of excellent familiar American vaudeville acts, and generally po but again postponed because the management considered the weather too cold for comfort in tinction personally cannot separate it from their professional fame. Some of them wouldn't they could. De Wolf Hopper joked at the Lambs' gambol as he is wont to on the stage about his marrying habit, and Lillian Russell often makes an audience laugh by references to wedlock. Two players who made transits from legitimate drama to vaudeville vesterday. Mason and Victory Bateman, had lately new marriages and other affairs of the heart. It is unlikely that their salaries were any the less on that account. It is certain that they objects of extra interest individually. Mrs. Bateman-Mestaver acted at Proctor's Fifth Avenue in the Gilbert comediette of "Sweethearts" with her husband, Harry Mestayer. She had gained in plumpness to a pudgy degree, and lost nothing in cleverness, since seen last before on the New York stage. She will be recalled by many readers as a handsome young woman with a lovely voice and a technical command of the best method in acting. During ber absence she had been a leader in Southern and Western resident companies. In St. Louis she had met Mr. Mestaver, and the ensuing courtship and marriage had been attended by readable episodes. The audience yesterday afternoon gave to the husband a thorough looking over upon his entrance. He was a presentable young fellow, seemingly about twenty-one, no taller than his wife, and not impressive. In the half-hour play, with its first scene of a girl's coquettish parting with her ardent lover, and its second of his return after thirty years to find that she was fond and true after all, the burden was borne by Mrs. Mestayer with little help from her companion. He got through his part in barely respectable mediocrity, while she, though rather mature as the whimsical young girl, was so unaffectedly and tenderly pathetic in the guise of the middle-aged woman that she won the uncommon tribute of tears from a vaudeville assemblage. This fact is not given in disrespect to the people who go to the continuous shows. They are quite up to the general theatrical average in intelligence and appearance. The Fifth Avenue was at this time handsomely occupied. But mirth prevails in these houses, and it is not easy to make so sentimental a piece as "Sweethearts" effectual. Mrs. Mestayer did it. Mr. Mestayer was of no particular use save as a personal exhibit. courtship and marriage had been attended

John Mason made an odd essay at Keith's. The programme announced him in a medium of his own make with assistance from Grant Stewart, and gave its title as "His Life's Lesson." The actor's recent doings have been exploited and a hint had been given that this monologue would treat of his personal affairs. But it did not. In the character of a social degenerate the actor returned to his home from a meeting with men friends at 3 o'clock in the morning. He entered his rooms singing jovially, but without a sign of intoxication. As he opened a mail that consisted entirely of duns, he explained that he had promised to return at midnight and expressed much contrition for his misbehavior. With resort to a decanter of llquor he told how naughty he had been and how his indulgent father had refused further to support him. A later recourse to the decanter turned him to talking of the friends he had just left and to telling an incident of one of them that was rather weak in its comicality. Then there was more contrition, followed by the assertion that the end had come. This hinted of suicide, but it was explained that the spendthrift had enlisted in the army in order that his father might know that money set aside for the young wife's support would go to her alone. From remorseful suicide to donning Uncle Sam's blue was a dramatic fall for the weaking hero, but it was accompanied by a rise in beverages. Four visits to the decanter had aroused a thirst that only champagne could quench, and the household's last pint was opened after much declamatory praise of the beverage. Following a sip of it the husband thought he could break the news of his enlistment to the wife he supposed to be sleeping in the next room. A note left for him by her said that she was greatly distressed by his tardness and had gone away. Then came more confessions of a naughty boy, followed by a glass of the wine in honor of the distressed woman. With this in hand he passed from view to return aghast with the knowledge that the wife's going away had been suicide. As a lesson in the evil consequences of staying out with the boys the monologue had a moral. In this respect it need not have come to the borough of Manhattan, as it did, with a Boston indorsement. There were hints, also, as to the error of taking free advantage of one's credit. Yet the wife did not seem to suffer greatly from that feature of the husband's past. Possibly he had done something naughtler. A few more trips to the decanter might have led him to disclose what it was. But as it stood his wife took her life because he came ham three hours late in a fit condition to withaside for the young wife's support would go to persisted further against the lateness of the season last night, James K. Hackett figured valiantly in the sentimental romance of "The Pride of Jennico" at the Criterion. William Gillette in the detective wonders of "Sherlock Holmes" at the Garrick, Elita Proctor Otis in the passionate furies of "Woman and Wine" at the Academy of Music and William Haworth in the Christian martyrdom of "Quo Vadis" at the

The Donnelly stock company at the Murray Hill began the final week of its season with the Robertson comedy of "Caste," in which Eccles was played by Henry V. Donnelly with unction. Yesterday's continuous shows were noticeable for pleasing successions of variety, with here and there brief dramatic installments, Williams and Tucker and Fish and Warren were to the fore at Pastor's. Some motion pictures of South African war scenes were new at the Eden Musée.

of South African war scenes were new at the Eden Musée.
At Proctor's Twenty-third Street the Cohans were amusing in a farce that filled twice the time of a specialty, a point that of itself requires bright performances to avoid dulness Della Rocca, Ethel Levy and Yorke and Adams were some of the variety folk.

Isabelle Urquhart played a familiar comedicate at Proctor's Palace, and there were lively specialties from Zeno and Carl, Jess Dandy and Fanny Fields.

Performers to the fore at Proctor's Fifth Avenue were the Hawaiian, three women whose sketch is to comic opera what the vaude-ville short farce is to a full-length comedy; and McIntyre and Heath, who are laughable imitators of forlorn negroes.

Lockhart's elephants, small ones this time, were an amusing exhibit at Keith's, where Wills and I oretto and the Johnsons were specialists.

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

Some of the larger stores on upper Broadway are now rented for the greater part of the time, although in accordance with a practice which has only become general during recent years. This rule holds good especially in the case of stores of great size and conspicuous situation. Their rents are so high that only the most prosperous concerns could afford to occupy them permanently. The result of this has been the creation of a new form of tenancy. One of these big stores will be rented by some concern anxious to bring its products to the attention of the class of persons that pass up and down certain sections of Broadway. It is never intended to occupy these places for more than a few months, and that condition is understood by both landlord and tenant. Many of the large stores on upper Broadway have gone through this experience several times before permanent tenants who rented the building for the regular transaction of their business could be found. This class of tenancy in spite of its transient nature is popular with landlords. High rents are paid without dispute and thus excellent and profitable occupants are found until permanent tenants who are able to pay such high prices come along. Their rents are so high that only the most pros-

Mrs. Franz Kaltenborn, wife of the conductor, has always been held responsible for much of his success, and it was through her tact and energy that the concerts at the St. Nicholas Garden succeeded last summer when various other better-known conductors had tried the same experiment and failed. It began to look as if the demand for good music at popular prices, with the opportunity of enjoying mild liquidrefreshment did not really exist here, in spite of the repeated declarations to the contrary. The Kaltenborn concerts, however, established the genuineness of the demand, and the audience on Saturday night was large enough to promise another successful year for the enterprise. Mrs. Kaltenborn was nearly as active in the auditorium as her husband was on the platform. She was busily directing the ushers to find seats for late arrivals and looking after their comfort in various other ways. Mrs. Kaltenborn's labors have already been rewarded with such a degree of success that she has earned the distinction which is given to her this year. Her photograph hangs in the lobby of the hall next to her husband's. Under it is the word "Manager," and everybody familiar with her share in the concerts realizes that she is entitled to have her picture displayed in this fashion. experiment and failed. ### CARVALHO AT A COURT-MARTIAL. Handwriting Expert Testides Against Lieut.

The prosecution in the court-martial trial of Lieut. Edward M. Martin of the Fifth Artillery sprung another surprise on the defence by introducing David H. Carvalho, the handwriting expert, when the hearing of testimony was resumed at Fort Hamilton yesterday. Mr. Carvalho said he had been engaged by Judge Advocate Lieut. Brooke Payne to make an examination and comparison of the allsged falsified receipts and the account books uept by Lieut, Martin, while Martin was Treasure: of the post exchange and canteen at Fort Hancock. He had spent over six hour sin the examination, and in his opinion the handwriting on certain pages in the books where the signature of Lieut. Martin appeared was that of the person who wrote the receipts. To aid him the examination, Carvalho further said. he had used a microscope and protractor and had found similarity, peculiarity and variations. had found similarity, peculiarity and variations. In the receipt of the Alexander Campbell Milk Company, where the name of Schwartz appeared the writing was more or less disguised. The person who signed the receipt changed the manner of holding the pen and used more pressure on the capital letters. In the small letters there was a poor attempt at disguise. In the "Recieved payment" on the bills the same peculiarity of the "R's" and "B's" existed as in the books.

letters there was a poor attempt at disguise. In the "Recieved payment" on the bills the same peculiarity of the "R's" and "B's" existed as in the books.

Mr. Carvalho for the benefit of the Court made an illustration of the capital and small letters and pointed out the pen movement which, he said, had been used. In answer to a question by the Court; he said that he had made a chemical test of the ink used in signing the receipts and that of the writing in the books and had found that they were the same. The red ink used in the receipt of Charles H. Ellharz was also found in Martin's records. Bilharz last week testified that he had never used red ink in his business and that his name had been forged on the receipt.

In the cross-examination Lawyer Edward Hymer got Carvalho to say that he had differed with other handwriting experts when they had been pitted against him in cases. He further said that he had found dissimilarities in the handwriting in question. He laid stress on the "th's" and said that in almost every place where they were found in the wriing the person had written differently.

WOOLSON COMPANY'S REPLY.

It Accuses the Arbuckles of Trying to Get Trade Secrets Improperly.

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 4.-The Woolson Spice Company filed its answer this afternoon in the suit brought by John Arbuckle, William V. R. Smith, James N. Garvie and William A. Jamieson for an order to inspect the company's books. The case will be heard on its merits on July 2 by Judge Pugsley. Among other things the answer says:

"That shortly before Dec. 31, 1896, the new purchasers of said stock inaugurated a policy of extending the business of said Woolson Spice Company by reducing the selling price of coffee which had been maintained, as hereafter shown, at an exorbitant and extravagant price and profit. That with full knowledge of the purchase of said stock and the inauguration purchase of said stock and the inauguration of the policy of the new owners, the said plaintiffs induced said John S. Acklin, Jr., to refuse to sell or deliver his stock, under the terms of said purchase, and by offering said Acklin $100,000 for sixty shares of stock, induced him to deliver said stock to them; and thereupon without any notice to said Woolson Spice Company, its officers, directors or agents, or any request of any kind, immediately instructed counsel to file a petition against said Woolson Spice Company to enjoin it from doing business, to declare its charter forfeited, to appoint a receiver for it, to sell its assets and destroy its life.

"And defendants aver that said plaintiffs have no other purpose in seeking an examination of the books of the Woolson Spice Company than the unlawful one of seeking cause for vexatious litigation against said company and in their own interest as its rival to obtain, for the purpose of injuring said Woolson Spice Company, information of its customers, dealers, methods of business, processes, contracts and transactions, which in their rivalry they seek to use for the injury and harm of the Woolson Spice Company." of the policy of the new owners, the said

GOVERNOR AT STATE CAMP. DROPS OFF AT ROA'S HOOK ON THE WAY TO ALBANY.

Catches Up With the Twenty-second Regiment Marching to the New Camp and Rides in at !Its Head-One Man Falls by Wayside-Salute for the Governor.

STATE CAMP. Peekskill, June 4.-It was a sort of informal visit Gov. Roosevelt made to the State camp to-day. He merely dropped in for half a day on his way up to Albany. If the big 12-pounder brass gun on the hil crest above the ferry landing had kept quiet the fact that the Governor had arrived would hardly have been known even in camp, to say nothing of over in Peekskill town.

But exactly at 10 o'clock in the morning the gun started in on its salute of nineteen, and then all the country for miles around knew he had got here. He kept to his programme exactly as it had been outlined on Saturday The fast through train which he took at the Grand Central Station at 8:45 in the morning, and which is scheduled to make its first stop at Poughkeepsie, was halted at Roa's Hook for his special benefit, and awaiting him were Gen. Roe, Col. Henry and Major Greer, who had ridden down from the camp to meet him. Two or three grooms accompanied them with "Black Prince," which was the horse selected for the Governor's use, together with other saddle horses for those who might accompany

There were only two in the Governor's party besides himself. Adjutant-General Hoffman, who went down to New York from Albany on Saturday, was one of them, and Col. Treadwell, the military private secretary, was the other. Only Col. Treadwell was in uniform, but the Adjutant-Col. Treadwell was in uniform, but the Adjutant-General had his military clothes with him and went into the "White House" at headquarters and put them on as soon as he got to the top of the hill. The Governor only changed his shoes for a pair of riding boots, and then was ready for the road over which the Twenty-second Regiment was at that moment march-ing on its way to the new camp at Lake Moheready for the road over which the Twentysecond Regiment was at that moment marching on its way to the new camp at Lake Mohegan, seven miles away.

The Sixty-ninth Regiment was engaged in battalion drill when the Governor arrived and went right on with their work as if he were just an ordinary visitor. They were still hard at it when he, Gen. Roe. Adjutant-General Hoffman, Major Greer and Col. Henry galloped across the parade ground on the way to the lake.

It was then 10:45 and the Twenty-second Regiment had been toiling over the steep hills of the road for two hours. The regiment got away in fine shape. The teamsters were stirring as early as 4 o'clock in the morning.
The orders were that the work of loading the wagons should begin at 6 o'clock and at one minute before 6 the first piece of baggage was thrown in. Tents were struck under the inspection of Capt. Lyon of the Twentysecond Regular Army Regiment, who, on the day before had given the regiment instructions in that very matter, and he expressed himself as much pleased with the way in which the work was done.

The march was made in four stages, the first halt of twenty minutes being made from 10:21 to 10:41 and still another from 11:24 to 11:49. The regiment reached the camping ground at 12:15 and seven men had failen out during the march. One of these who only weighed 110 pounds found the steep hills and the fifty-two pounds burden he had to carry so much beyond his strength that he had to be carried into camp in an ambulance. The other six came struggling in a little after the regiment arrived. Capt. Lyon said this was an admirable showing considering the fact that many of the men had come right out of offices and stores and were practically withthe regiment at the last halt at 11:49 and rode at the head of the column to the camping ground.

Gov. Roosevelt and his escort came up with the regiment at the lance and rode to Roa's Hook, where he got a train at 4:30 for Albany.

The Lake Mohegan camp is on a hillside and with the wind in the wrong direction, or with no wino at all, promises to be fine training grounds for soldiering in the tropics, but does not provide much in the way of comfort for the men. There is practically no shade of any kind in the field and the sun in the afternoon beats down with great intensity. The any kind in the field and the sun in the afternoon beats down with great intensity. The lake in the distance looks cool through the boughs of the trees that border its edge, and that may be a consolation and it may not.
The Twenty-second will remain until Wednesday and then the Sixty-ninth will take its turn at marching and testing the advantages of the lake shore camp.

Just before the Governor caught up with the regiment to-day he found two companies of the Lake Military School drawn up in fine

SENATE PROCEEDINGS.

Pro-Boer Resolution Introduced -House Anti-Trust Bill Received.

WASHINGTON, June 4.- The Senate met at 10 o'clock this morning. A resolution offered by Mr. Mason (Rep., Ill.) expresses the hope of the Senate that the war in South Africa may cease at an early day upon terms satisfactory to those engaged therein, including inde-pendence for the South African States. It was laid on the table temporarily.

In an effort to have a special arrangement made for private pension bills, Mr. Pettigrew (Pop., S. D.) protested against it. He said that more pension bills had been passed this session than at any other session for years, and that that indicated conclusively either that the pension laws are defective and unjust or that special favors are granted for political purposes.

A substitute was reported from the Finance Committee by Mr. Aldrich (Rep., R. I.), its chairman, for the House bill to provide better facilities for the safe keeping and disbursement of public moneys in the Philippine Islands, Cuba and Porto Rico, and it was passed. It authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to designate one or more banks or bankers in the Philippine Islands, Cuba and Porto Rico in which public moneys may be deposited, provided satisfactory security be given by depositing bonds in the Treasury to an amount not less than the aggregate sum at any time on deposit.

In having recommitted to the Committee on Post Offices a bill for the classification of clerks in the first and second class post offices, Mr. Wolcott (Rep., Col.), chairman of the Post Office Committee, mentioned "as a warning and suggestion" that clerks of first and second class post offices had been contributing 10 per cent. of their compensation as a fund to influence the legislation of Congress in their behalf. They had been able to employ, he hoped, some good men; but he knew of some notoriously bad men whom they had employed, and who infested committee rooms and corridors. The clerks gained nothing by such action. No such sum as $60,000 (which had been contributed) could be legitimately used by the agents of these post office clerks.

Mr. Butler (Pop., N. C.), a member of the Post Office Committee, said that if all the assessments were paid they would amount to $600,000.

Mr. Wolcott said he had no doubt of it. Every man who was supposed to "have a pull" got himself employed by these poor clerks, and hung around the capitol in the supposition that they were pressing legislation.

The bill was recommitted.

The House bill to provide for the use of timber and stone for domestic and industrial purposes in the Indian Territory was passed, with an amendment. Also, joint resolution to empower the Spanish Bank of Porto Rico to amend its by-laws.

Mr. Gallinger (Rep., N. H.) said that the bill was too important to be acted upon without con-sideration by a committee, and he moved its reference to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Pettigrew demanded the year and nays on the motion to refer. on the motion to refer.

ceed to its consideration be in order to-morrow?

The President pro tem.—No, because the bill must lie on the table until it has had two separate readings, and the rule is that the two readings shall not be on the same day. It has been read once to-day.

Mr. Allen (Pop., Neb.)—I suppose a majority of the Senate can overrule the Chair.

The President pro tem.—If an appeal be taken from the decision of the Chair, and if the decision be overruled, then I suppose the bill would be in the control of the Senate.

Mr. Allen—I ask unanimous consent to have the second reading now.

Mr. Aldrich (Rep., R. I.)—I object. It is very evident that this bill cannot be taken up at this session, and this attempt to do so is simply a farce.

Mr. Pettigrew—I will call for its second reading to-morrow.

wounded and the number taken prisoners since the Philippine outbreak. The War Department did not have this information on hand and cabled Gen. MacArthur at Manila hand and cabled Gen. MacArthur at Maniia for it. His reply was received to-day and the answer to the resolution prepared. Gen. MacArthur says:

"Filipinos killed, 10.780; wounded, 2.104; captured and surrendered, 10.425. Number of prisoners in our possession, about 2.000. No systematic record of Filipino casualties at these headquarters. The foregoing, compiled from large number of reports made immediately after engagements, is as close an approximation as is now possible, owing to wide distribution of troops. More accurate report would take weeks to prepare. The number reported killed is probably in excess of accurate figures; number reported wounded probably much less, as Filipinos managed to remove most of the wounded from the field and comparatively few fell into our hands. Officers of high rank and dangerous, suspicious men have been retained as prisoners; most other men discharged on the field as soon as disarmed."

JERSEY'S TAX ON TRUSTS.

REVENUE OF ABOUT $1,500,000 FROM CORPORATIONS.

This Does Not Include the Railroad and Canal Companies-A List of the Trusts Incorpo-rated in That State-Their Capitalization and What They Contribute in Taxes.

TRENTON, N. J., June 4 .- The State Board of Assessors to-day filed in the office of Comp-troller Hancock a partial schedule of the tax sments on miscellaneous corporations for the year 1900. Railroad and canal companies are not in this class. The list filed embraces only about 60 per cent. of the companies to be taxed this year, but as all the big trusts are in the schedule it is estimated that the assessments represent about 90 per cent. of all the taxes to be imposed under this head. The whole number of companies in the schedule is 3,773 and their taxes aggregate $1,554,126.01, which is $653,000 more than the amount of last year's schedule Following is a summary:

79 Gas and electric companies. 235,846.99

Mr. Teller Says He Would Not Give Them Up.

WASHINGTON, June 4 .- In a speech delivered in the Senate to-day Mr. Teller of Colorado said that he saw no way to surrender the Philippine Islands-no way to give up control over them. The obligations of the United States to the world required the maintenance of American sovereignty, and he believed that that sovereignty could be maintained consistently with the traditions of the Government. He believed that the United States could give to the Filipinos political self-government and independence, in the proper sense of the term, while the United States continued to hold sovereign powers. He did not know that anybody had ever suggested that the United States should abandon the Philippine Islands and leave them to be the prey of other powers. Even the senior Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Hoar) had declared that they should not be turned over to Spain, but that the Unit States should stand between them and the world until they were able to take care of themselves. There would be, he declared, no ques-world until they were able to take care of themselves. There would be, he declared, no question of imperialism in the next campaign unless the Republican party made it. The senior Senator from Massachusetts had predicted, in his speech, not only the destruction of the republic by the imperialistic policy, but, what seemed to hurt him much more, the destruction of the party to which he belonged.

"When the Senator got through," Mr. Teller continued, "I was unable to say whether his anxiety, on which help had expended so much pathos and learning, arose because of his interest in the cause of liberty and freedom and in the people of those islands, or whether it arose simply from the fear that the course being pursued would bring his party to defeat. If anything was striking in that speech it was the Senator's appeal to his party not to face defeat, but to change their policy, which he declared to be imperialistic, for fear of defeat. That is in keeping with the criticisms which have come from Republicans everywhere. Everywhere there has been infinitely more concern about the salvation of the party in the coming campaign than about whether justice and right should be meted out to these people who have fallen under our jurisdiction.

"I shall not support the Republican party in the coming campaign," he continued. "I would not support the policy foreshadowed in the Philippine bill. I would not give up the islands, either. They should be a source of great advantage to us. When we shall mete out justice to this people and recognize the great fundamental principle that all men are entitled to self government, then we shall find it profitable to hold those islands. They stand in the great pathway of the commerce of the world, and they can be made of infinite value to us."

HAZEL'S NOMINATION REPORTED. Senate Judiciary Committee Favors Confirma tion, but Action Is Postponed.

WASHINGTON, June 4. - The Senate Committee on Judiciary to-day made a favorable report on the nomination of John R. Hazel of Buffelo to be United States Judge of the newly created Western Judicial District of New York. The vote on reporting the nomination was not unanimous, one Senator, Mr. Pettus of Alabama, being recorded against it. The nomination was later reported to the Senate in executive session and an attempt made to confirm it, but objection was made, which, under the rules, carried it over without action until the next executive session.

CONFERENCE REPORTS IN THE HOUSE. Mr. Cannon Attacks the Senate for Its Amend

ments to the Sundry Civil Bill. WASHINGTON, June 4 .- A further confer ence report was presented to the House to-day n the District of Columbia appropriation bill, including a disagreement on an item of $100. 000 for a site for a municipal hospital. Mr. Fitzgerald (Dem., Mass.) addressed the House on sectarian appropriations, support-ing them. He predicted the rise of a Catholic party if the persecution of the Catholic se tarian institutions continued. Mr. Bingham (Rep., Pa.), who had been charged with opposing the appropriation for St. Joseph's Asylum of the District of Columbia, said he had acted while on the Conference Committee simply in accordance with the ir structions of the House.

The House voted, 80 to 68, to recede from its disagreement to the amendment and the Senate amendment was agreed to.

Mr. Cannon (Rep., Ill.) presented the conference report on the Sundry Civil bill. He made an attack on the Senate for attaching to the bill so many new provisions which were anauthorized by law. The Senate he said, had the House at a disadvantage, as it could hold up great appropriation bills until its amendments were adopted. He would not characterize the situation as "infamous, but would say he thought it "thoroughly bad."

Separate votes were demanded on a numper of the Senate amendments still in dispute

Separate votes were demanded on a number of the Senate amendments still in dispute. On the amendment appropriating $100,000 for a light and fog signal station at the outer end of the entrance to the Toledo, Ohio, harbor, the House, by a vote of $1 to 63, refused to concur. The House refused, $17 to 131, to concur in the amendment appropriating $200,000 for beginning the work of constructing a memorial bridge between Washington and the Arlington National Cemetery.

The Senate amendment appropriating $2,750,000 for continuing the work of improving the Mississippi River was advocated by Mr. Catchings (Dem., Miss.) and opposed by Mr. Hepburn (Pop., Ia.), who attacked the present leves system as a means of improving the navigation of the river. The House, however, by a vote of 106 to 47, receded from its disagreement and accepted the Senate amendment.

The next vote was had on the amendment appropriating $5,000,000 toward the exposition to be held at St. Louis in 1901 in celebration of the Louisiana Purchase, and it was agreed to—127 to 75. A further conference was ordered on the Items still in dispute.

The Senate amendments to the Emergency River and Harbor bill were non-concurred in and the bill sent to conference.

The conference report on the bill incorporating the National Red Cross was presented and agreed to. The Senate conferences accepted the House amendment.

Owing to press of business, culogies on the late Representatives Harmer of Pennsylvania and Hurley of New York were postponed until December next.

An attempt was made to send to conference
